

Wilson A1610 Elite 1 Baseball Glove

Technical Description

Introduction

The Wilson A1610 Elite 1 is a brown leather baseball glove intended for adult use in any outfield position, by pitchers, or by players who prefer a large glove. The glove has yellow logos and webbing sewn between the thumb and index finger positions. The glove is fitted for use by a right-hand dominant player who would wear the glove on their left hand. The glove has fleece padding on the interior so it can be put on and removed without discomfort.

Features

- The glove is shaped to fit the hand and the leather is conditioned so the break-in period is shortened. Over time the leather will adapt to the hand shape of the player for a custom fit.
- The glove stitching is flat to reduce the affect it may have when catching a baseball or transferring a baseball from the glove to the throwing hand.
- There is a deep pocket sewn between the thumb and index finger of the glove. This assists the player with securing the ball in their glove.
- For players who prefer to play with the index finger outside the glove, there is a hole on the back of the glove to allow the player to place their finger on the outside of the glove.

To use the glove, put the left hand into the glove through the hole at the base. Line up the fingers with each hole in the glove and push each finger in until the fit is secure. Expand the fingers outward to open the glove and extend the arm toward the incoming baseball. When the baseball arrives, squeeze the fingers together to close the glove around the baseball. Open the glove again and remove the baseball with the right hand.
